National Youth Council (NYC) x Singapore Polytechnic (SP) Webinar Series 2024-2025: Webinar #3 - Is Success One-Size-Fits-All?

21 May 2025 | Online (Zoom)

On 21 May 2025, 888 youths from Singapore Polytechnic (SP) participated in a webinar on diverse paths of success which discussed: (i) the evolving definitions of success, (ii) potential strategies to overcome challenges that hinder them from pursuing their definition of success, and (iii) the resources youths can tap on to achieve their passions.

This session was co-organised by SP and the National Youth Council (NYC), and involved the following panellists and moderator:

- Mr Mohamed Fayyaz, IMPROF member, and Government Advisory, Tony Blair Institute for Global Change
- Ms Han Xin Ying Constance, SP Graduate
- [Moderator] Ms Yeoh Wan Qing, Co-Founder of Hatch, and NYC INSPIRIT member

The moderator began by sharing that NYC and its Government and non-Government partners were conducting a year-long series of engagements, one of which was the NYC x SP webinar, to develop the SG Youth Plan. She said that the SG Youth Plan was an inclusive action blueprint that intended to capture the hopes and aspirations of young Singaporeans, to empower them to co-create the future Singapore they want to see by catalysing opportunities, platforms, and resources for youths and others to take action together.

i) Exploring the evolving definitions of success

Participants were asked (via Slido) whether they could choose their own definition of success.

I can choose my own definition of success in Singapore.
Strongly Agree 15 %
Agree	47 %
Neutral 25 %
Disagree 9 %
Strongly Disagree

• The top response was "Agree" (47%).

• Mr Fayyaz said that he observed that youths' definitions of success had evolved. He said that when he was a student, success was narrowly defined by academic grades due to a "survival mindset" that led to competition among peers. He said that participants should reflect on their personal definition of success instead of traditional interpretations.

Participants were asked (via Slido) to share what they wanted to achieve in charting their desired pathway.

What are your hopes and aspirations in charting your desired pathway? I want to Feel content with my life choices and experiences
Find fulfilment and purpose in my work
Accept trade-offs between pursuing passion and monetary returns 32 %
Make a positive impact on society 42 %
Gain recognition and respect in my chosen field 47 %
Develop and start my own business
Continuously learn and improve myself
Be adaptable amid an uncertain world 54 %

- The top response was "[to] feel content with [one's] life choices and experiences", at 83%.
- Mr Fayyaz said that in order for youths to reach their aspirations, they needed to understand that trade-offs had to be made, and to be strategic about their goals.

(ii) Strategies to overcome challenges that hinder youths from pursuing their own definition of success

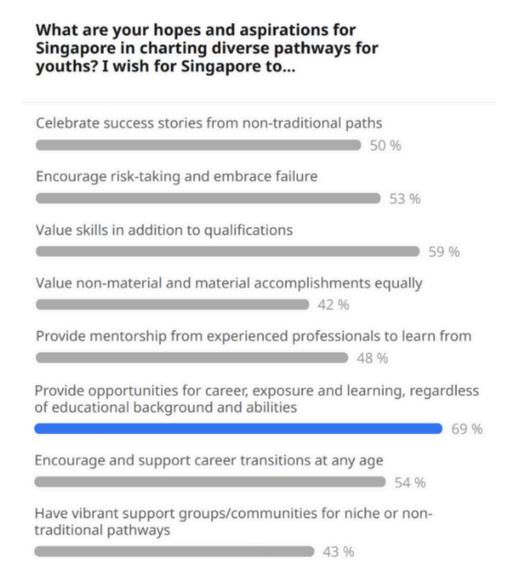

Participants asked (via Zoom Webinar Q&A) what were some challenges they might face when pursuing non traditional goals.

- Ms Han said that youths were likely to face societal pressure to prioritise stability over passion and peer comparison which could lead to self-doubt. She said that youths should view challenges as learning opportunities and focus on exploring different interests while maintaining a growth mindset, and find supportive communities while pursuing their goals.
- Mr Fayyaz said that youths would face tensions such as time constraints. He said that youths should identify what truly made them happy and focus on achieving their goals through breaking them down into short, medium and long-term targets.

The moderator asked Ms Han how she managed her time between different commitments during her time at Singapore Polytechnic, and what youths should do to avoid burnout.

- Ms Han said that she experienced burnout from juggling too many responsibilities but overcame it by reflecting on what she truly wanted to pursue, such as weighing the pros and cons of her desired industry. She advised participants to plan their time efficiently and adjust their commitments when necessary.
- Mr Fayyaz said that by having multiple definitions of success, and understanding that they could constantly reevaluate what success meant to them, youths could avoid mental distress and feeling burnt out when they were unable to achieve their goals.

Participants were asked (via Slido) about their hopes and aspirations for Singapore in charting diverse pathways for youths.

• The top response was for Singapore to provide opportunities for career, exposure and learning, regardless of educational background and abilities (69%).

Participants asked (via Zoom Webinar Q&A) about the challenges of pursuing non-traditional goals and how to manage them.

- Ms Han said that youths were likely to face societal pressure to prioritise stability over passion and peer comparison which could lead to self-doubt. She said that youths should view challenges as learning opportunities and focus on exploring different interests while maintaining a growth mindset, and find supportive communities while pursuing their goals.
- Mr Fayyaz said that while academic achievements remained an important marker of success in Singapore, there was growing acceptance of different pathways. He said that individuals should focus on excelling in their areas of interests regardless of stigma, and could seek mentors to help navigate challenges. He said that recognising diverse pathways of success would help shift mindsets from comparison to appreciating different strengths. He also said that youths should adopt a growth mindset and treat the pursuit of success as a journey.

• Mr Fayyaz said that while academic achievements remained an important marker of success in Singapore, there was growing acceptance of different pathways. He said that individuals should focus on excelling in their areas of interests regardless of stigma, and could seek mentors to help navigate challenges. He said that recognising diverse pathways of success would help shift mindsets from comparison to appreciating different strengths. He also said that youths should adopt a growth mindset and treat the pursuit of success as a journey.

Participants asked (via Zoom Webinar Q&A) about the challenges of pursuing non-traditional goals and how to manage them.

- Ms Han said that youths were likely to face societal pressure to prioritise stability over passion and peer comparison which could lead to self-doubt. She said that youths should view challenges as learning opportunities and focus on exploring different interests while maintaining a growth mindset, and find supportive communities while pursuing their goals.
- Mr Fayyaz said that while academic achievements remained an important marker of success in Singapore, there was growing acceptance of different pathways. He said that individuals should focus on excelling in their areas of interests regardless of stigma, and could seek mentors to help navigate challenges. He said that recognising diverse pathways of success would help shift mindsets from comparison to appreciating different strengths. He also said that youths should adopt a growth mindset and treat the pursuit of success as a journey.

Participants were asked (via Slido) what would youths do to achieve their aspirations in charting diverse pathways in Singapore.

What would you do to achieve your aspirations in charting diverse pathways in Singapore? Advocate and share success stories from non-traditional paths 42 % Champion risk-taking and support those who experience failure 39 % Appreciate accomplishments beyond material success or academic qualifications 56 % Participate in a mentorship programme as a mentor or a mentee 37 % Establish or join a support group/community in niche or nontraditional pathways 32 % Stay updated on emerging industries and career options 40 % Identify and develop my passion or niche interests 53 % Pursue diverse education or career options even if it deviates from conventional paths 35 % Explore short-term gigs and internships 36 % Develop skills and knowledge required to pursue my desired pathway 63 %

• The top response was to "develop skills and knowledge to pursue my desired pathway" (63%).

(iii) Resources that youths can leverage to pursue their version of success

Participants were asked (via Slido) what single change would they make to help achieve their ideal society.

What single change would you make to help achieve your ideal society?

- The top response from participants was "acceptance".
- The moderator noted that building a supportive community that values diverse forms of success is essential and can pave the way toward a more inclusive and accepting society.

Participants asked (via Zoom Webinar Q&A) what success meant and if it was a journey or destination. They also asked how to measure progress towards personal success.

- Ms Han said that success varied for individuals at different stages of their lives. She said that she saw success as a journey rather than a destination, with different milestones, such as starting a family or securing a home. She said that youths should define success based on personal growth and experiences. She also said that mentors had helped her navigate her personal journeys by providing clarity, encouragement, and opportunities for growth.
- Ms Han said that self-reflection was key to measuring progress. She said that youths should focus less on grades or achievements, and instead reflect on their experiences to stay grounded, manage pressure and track their growth towards long-term goals.

A participant asked (via Zoom Webinar Q&A) what were future career trends and essential skills that youths needed to pursue non-traditional paths.

- Mr Fayyaz said that appreciating diverse strengths and pathways was essential for youths taking nontraditional routes. He said that future success would require soft-skills like collaboration and adaptability, and learning how to harness each other's strengths in pursuit of a common goal
- Ms Han said that her volunteering experience at Youth Corps Singapore and internships had enabled her to discover her strengths, and youths should leverage these opportunities to gain real-world experience and exposure that would help them understand their passion and evaluate potential career pathways.

Closing Remarks

The moderator asked the panellists what advice they would give youths.

- Ms Han said that youths should embrace uncertainty when pursuing their passions, even in the absence of support. She said that taking initiative could lead to new opportunities, and that failure was part of the process. She said that youths should support each other and celebrate different paths to success.
- Mr Fayyaz agreed that failure was a natural part of achieving success. He said that mistakes provided learning opportunities and adopting a "failing forward" mindset would help youths build resilience. He also said that youths should focus on growth, find support networks, and remain open to unexpected opportunities.
- The moderator summarised that success was a personal journey that evolved over time. She said that as society became more accepting of different definitions of success, youths should take small steps towards their goals, and leverage mentors to seek guidance and surround themselves with supportive communities.

Here are some available resources for youths looking to start defining their own version of success and find their own mentors:

- Discover: On My Way https://discover.nyc.gov.sg/omw
- MentoringSG https://mentoring.sg/
- Singapore Polytechnic Education and Career Guidance (ECG) Students can request an appointment to consult their respective schools' Education and Career Coach (ECC) at https://www.sp.edu.sg/student-services/education-and-career-guidance by clicking on the "For Full-Time Students" button. Students can also walk into T127 ECG Consultation Rooms every Wednesday and Thursday during term time between 12pm 3pm (no appointment required).

SG Youth Plan

To encourage a whole-of-society effort in supporting youths' aspirations, NYC will not only be engaging youths from all walks of life but also non-youth stakeholders from the rest of society.

• Want to share your aspirations, voice your ideas, and connect with others who are just as passionate about making a difference to Singapore? Find out how you can take part in the SG Youth Plan engagements and other opportunities in NYC! You can also lend your voice to issues youths are concerned about through completing online tasks on CrowdTaskSG.